

what about interfaces: An interface defines the methods an object must have in order to be considered a particular type An interface is an abstract type that specifies a behavior that classes must implement Interfaces allow different classes to share similarities Not all classes need to have the same behavior